About the Material:

Environmental hazards plague the harvesting process of most outdoor furniture products. Tropical harvesting carries the risk of devastating rainforests and threatening the many species that inhabit it. There is, however, an alternative:

pressure treated pine.

Pressure treated pine serves as the wood of choice for marina docks, ski lodge decks, landscape walks and several other applications. Treated lumbers carry several advantages over traditional outdoor materials including its ability to be painted or stained (as well as being left in its natural wood finish). In addition plantation grown southern pine is milled from renewable resources which do not impact the environment.
